THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 17, 1863.

CUSTOM-HOUSE ABUSES.

As we would fain see Buenos Ayres on a par with other civilized nations we call attention to existing abuses, with the object rather of tending to their correction than of gratifying any morbid vanity to find fault, or passing a wanton censure on Argentine institutions. There is not, however, a merchant in this city who does not feel that our Custom-house is the greatest nuisance, and that our Executive, instead of correcting the limper fections of the Oriental Government, should improve its own fiscal administration. Commerce is the life of this new country, and the fewer difficulties placed in its way the more rapid will be our development.

Numberless are the complaints which reach our ears, every day, and as we advocated the nomination of M. Bilbao we are, in some measure, made answerable for his short-comings. We must simply protest against the arbitrary spirit which has communicated itself from the Policia to the Aduana, and hope for amendment.

Some few months back an English gentleman, bringing either a capital of more than one million dollars m[illegible] was obliged to pay duty on shirts, boots, &c., for personal use, although the law specially exempts immigrants' baggage. The Customs' official intimated that he did not come under the category, being a capitalist; to which he very forcibly replied, 'that such was the best class of immigrants for the republic.' This penalty on wealthy new-comers is not very politic indeed, and it is equally unjust and impolitic to make such exceptions from the general law.

The Customs, being intended as a source of revenue and precaution against smug, ling, should never be converted into an engine of vexation. In case of Mr. Cranwell, who, coming from Montevideo, was put to such trouble and loss on account of shirt-collars, that he had rather forfeit his property than go through the ordeal requisite to despatch a bale of merchandise. That same absurdity was repeated in a case, with a gentleman from Entre Rios, who bought a case of tins of butter for his family. The suspicious article was ex-mined with the necessary formality by one of the Custom-house officers, but the owner had not gone many yards before another official ordered testing the article. Our friend was decided whether to knock the tins down or make him a present of the market for his impudent curiosity.

This unnecessary rigor is carried so far, that a man cannot take a pair of boots about without procuring a 'permit.' Again suppose the steamer is about to sail 10 am and that the engineer requires a little oil, to run neither take it off or get a 'permit,' for the Custom house is not yet open; therefore the machinery may go wrong, or the vessel blow up, just because of Fiscal tom-foolery. In both instances the Customs degenerate from a public service to a public nuisance.

We have instances of downright tyranny, in which the letter of the law is strained, to victimize some unhappy individual who fosters national trade. The English cargo "Arctic" has been mulcted over £100 for a mistake in her Manifest, some goods embarked at the last hour, not appearing therein. No idea of smuggling could be entertained as the broker's manifest shows the discrepancy, including the articles so omitted. Nevertheless our purchased property under their pray, and to levied a little duties, for an error which, [illegible]ing, would have been rectified at the cost of half-a-crown.

This grasping spirit is also observable in the levying of imports on the Vizitas, which should be at least 10 p§ under the market-price, to leave a margin for fluctuations of currency and other causes. We advocated, on Monday, 312 reals paper, worth 12 shillings in England or $90 here, which they have cut down to 3.250 while the Tribuna paper, double our size, is assessed at (as we understand) 59 silver per ream. Hence it is that we have to pay 30 per cent over invoice price, and 30 per cent more than our native colleagues. Such a tax on knowledge, labor and literature is so barbarous that the officials ought to mitigate it as far as possible. Unhappily we perceive quite a contrary tendency in our Customs' administration.

But it is idle either to recapitulate the universal complaints, or hope for speedy amendment. The spirit of the Policia has crept into the Aduana, and we must bow our heads to its sovereign will, thanking heaven for all its blessings, among which, as good citizens, we are bound to place the Custom-house as the foremost subject wishing Providence may preserve Mr. Bilbao many years."

OUR PROSPECTS IN EUROPE.

The English mail has brought us very discouraging news. The capture of Corinth created a panic which drove down Buenos Ayrean Bonds 4 per cent, and threatened to cripple the new Argentine enterprises, especially the Central Central railway of Mr. Wheelwright. A check was also put to emigration, by the accounts of civil war on both sides of the Plate; and this was more disastrous than if half the city of Buenos Ayres had been burnt down.

Since the time of Adam and Eve men have been prone to shift their own blame to their neighbours' shoulders, and we learn, with more indignation than surprise, that the National Government lays at our door the charge of doing all this damage to the Republic. Of course it is not pretended that we were leagued with the Chacho or Flores, but, forsooth, we have generated the fell tit of Cordoba and expedition of Rincon Gallinas, to blind Europeans to the real state of the country. This may be Argentine journalism, but we do not understand such tricks in the Old World.

It is much to be regretted that the misconduct of a faction, and the weakness of our Executive, should appear to countenance the rebellion of the Colonel city of the republic, yet Argentines are wholly to blame. The Oriental invasion is equally unjustifiable, but of course is found in Buenos Ayres. How then can our politicians feel amazed that the effects of their own policy recoil on themselves? Or do they expect English capitalists will trust to the high flown promis s of reform, when we are actually degenerating from bad to worse in the short ago. What difference can the London Stock-exchange draw between the filibusters of Virgin, and Flores? Why, although Buenos Ayres shoots the former, and aids the latter?

There is a current of feeling in England highly favorable to the River Plate, which might be turned to great account, and can only be prejudiced by rumors of civil war. Money is not to be had on two great requisites, and these we can have to any amount, it peace and order be maintained. After a short time the Argentine Loan will be quoted in Europe, and then we shall see the Cordoba railway being thither £1,000,000 sterling, and foreign immigrants by thousands railway with half that capital and a troupe of badly laborers, the Ensenada and Concepcion projects, the Southern and Western railways, and Mr. Wheelwright's system of labor, intellect, and wealth; and numberless other valuable enterprises which such an improved state of affairs would call forth.

Mr. Wheelwright will ultimately succeed, as we trust, in forming the Central Argentine Co he is expected to do, but not without considerable delay, and the accessary negotiations, and despatched a cargo of railway iron for Rosario.

The Chascomus railway will probably commence operations before the end of the year, as we understand that Do. was disposed to accept the following proposition, now being introduced into the contract, although the tenor of it thereof was not yet known in England. We have no news of the Boca and Ensenada line.

The Northern Railway shares are at a good premium, and the announcement that the Government guarantee would not be needed, must have a good effect on all similar enterprises; for the Government guarantee is only equivalent to a premium of 12 per cent.

pay objects. Our reporter walks leisurely among the crowd which surrounded the body, and in company with the rest gazed upon the extended mass of flesh which was once the corpulent form of Colonel "H. F O'Brien. Notwithstanding the fearful process which the soldier had gone through, he was yet breathing with evident strength. The eyes were closed, but there was a very apparent twitching of the eyelids, while the lips were now and again convulsed, as if in the most intense agony.

The body dragged around the street.

After lying for somewhat of an hour in this position, several of the crowd took hold of the body by the legs, and dragged it from side to side of the street. This operation was gone through several times, when the crowd again left the body in its original position.

Life still existing.

Had Colonel O'Brien been a man of weak constitution, he would certainly have ceased to exist long before this time. He was, however, through life, a man of great natural strength, and this fact probably kept him breathing longer than any common person. The crowd remarked this, and watched his every slightest movement with the most intense anxiety. Now and then the head would be raised from the ground, while an application of a bottle from one of the crowd would dash the already mangled mass again to the earth. This conduct was carried on for some time, and when our reporter left, the body was still lying in the street, the last spark of existence evidently having taken flight.

Capture of John Morgan.

A daintier bit of desert after the glorious repast of Union victories which loyal souls have lately enjoyed could hardly have been devised than the capture of John Morgan. Just precisely what was wanting to fill up the measure of perfect satisfaction. The whole affair has something of the elegant interest of a comedy with the dramatic requirements all fulfilled. Hero—he saw—and he—as caught!

Morgan has long enjoyed the reputation of being the prince of all the rebel raiders—the chief of those free riders that gave such éclat to the early cavalry operations of the rebellion. Never this class have operated on so grand a theatre, with such unparalleled audacity and with such unbounded success as the free footed Kentuckian. There has also been a poetry and a romance of its kind attending his exploits that belong to those of none of his compeers. The immense line of communications which our army in Tennessee presents the numerous depots, outposts and garrisons, and the long stretch of single railroads have been the rich booty on which he has long preyed. General Rosecrans could never post a letter in Murfreesboro, and feel sure that it would not fall into the hands of Morgan rather than the person to whom it was addressed. Not a passenger could enter the train to from Nashville to Louisville without nervous anticipations that some of Morgan's band might labor it necessary its destination, stop it, to demand his money or his life. In all this class of operations his services to the rebel cause have been immense.

In regard to the list of organ's raids it is difficult to give any satisfactory explanation of its motive. Invasions of Kentucky last year had a definite object in connection with Bragg's advance. But this time it was neither the forerunner nor accompaniment of any such movement. It was possible, however, that he had hopes to give the idea that it was of the same nature, and thus cut off a portion of Rosecrans' force from the pursuit of Bragg. Never was attempt more completely unsuccessful. Not men was moved from Tennessee to follow him. On the whole, this raid was a fussy one, and, ever since Morgan entered Indiana and Ohio he has been moving not with any direct offensive object, but with the simple purpose of getting away.

It is, perhaps, fair to confess that our satisfact on at the capture is not lessened by the fact that we had not complete faith it would be brought about. The assurances of his prospective lodging brought by telegraph bore too stereotyped an air to inspire confidence. But he is caught, and the very great credit is certainly due the capturing captor. His motives grew flagging that while his leader is mabled, the greater part of the command has been taken. Morgan, in his advance, swam the Cumberland River with only one hundred men. At last, four thousand are to-day prisoners—the rest, after scattering, are skulking through the woods for their homes. The very best and most trusted of all the rebel raiders offending to the West is now clean cut off.

VOLUNTEERS.—Several young men have offered their services to President Barro, to help in defending the city against Flores and his gang.

ES ENTIRA.—This Tri una paper has been proved a sell. The object of issues is a fact, and the secretary's placard is a regular mystification.

Commemoration of Pavon.

To-day is the anniversary of the Battle of Pavon, we may say the only one only aspiration is, that Heaven will rain down its choicest blessings upon the country and its rulers, and accord u peace, prosperity and happiness.

MISCELLANY.

Mr. Gideon Welles, secretary to the Federal navy, denies that the Federal Government, or any of its agent have made any application to Lord Laird of Birkenhead, for the construction of vessels.

Sebastopol presents a most pitiful and melancholy appearance. The forts amongst desolated appearances. The forts on the north side are crumbling to pieces, and scarcely a soldier is visible. The garrisons are in rags and in wretched order. The Tartars fish for the wrecks occasioned by the gales of November, 1854, and recently recovered a big bull of sovereigns. The trenches have fallen in but are still recognizable. Great quantities of shot and shell lie about. The Redan is crumbling, and wounds are daily turning up in its rear. The Malakoff remains a mass of ruins. The Tartar appear to have a friendly rivalry with the English, and they have planted trees round several of the graves.

On Times Legs.—At Gettysburg the Confederate shells burst in the Federal lines near to the town on both sides, garnished as usual with the hitched horses or aids and orderlies. The flattened animals reared and plunged with fear, then down fell one, another—sixteen lay, dead and mangled before the fire ceased, all I tagge ned by their halters, which gave the very appearance of being dandified by the to pin fully. Those brute victims of a cruel war touched all hearts! Through the aidst of the storm of whizzing shells and exploding shot an ambulance, driven by its frenzied conductor at full speed, presented to all of us the marvel ous spectacle of a horse going round on its two hoth
